

Germantown Times begins coverage

Germantown Times is for the people of Germantown. It is a forum for the views of residents, neighbors and visitors. It is a source for news about the life and times of Germantown. It uses the latest Internet technology to tie us together. Community events, town politics, business and the people of Germantown are its subject. Please join us in creating a space where we all can be heard. It begins with this premise: for too long the people have been left out of decisions in Germantown. Information is the antidote. A website that can be accessed by everyone -- you don't even need to own a computer because the new library will have them -- gives all a chance to weigh in on the issues that touch us. This includes taxes, the schools, the coming debate about zoning and the possibilities of new enterprises in the town. In coming weeks we will be developing the website to include blogs, forums, letters and even a place for sources with important stories to tell, but wish to remain anonymous. This site is meant to bring community to our community. It will be civilized in tone and civil in content, and dashed with pepper and salt.
